How your buffet works

Everything is cooked fresh for your group and laid out in chafing dishes at the buffet line. Here is how we portion, serve and time it.

Party trays

Food comes in full trays and half trays. Each dish lists how many guests a tray serves. We cook the trays shown for your guest range, so you know in advance what reaches the table.

Self-service

Guests help themselves. Our team keeps the line tidy, refills plates and cutlery, and clears tables. Want servers portioning at the line? Add a managed buffet at ₱2,000 per server.

Drinks

Package drinks are counted per 10 guests and served through the event: buckets to the table, towers at the bar. Anything beyond the package is billed on consumption.

Timeline on the day

Ingress	30 minutes before your slot. Decorations, set-up and sound check. The buffet line is dressed and ready.
Start of event	Hot dishes are brought out within the first 15 minutes, as your guests settle in. Cold items and rice are out first.
During the event	Trays are replenished from the kitchen as they run low, until your cooked quantity is served. Our staff will tell your contact person when a dish is on its last tray.
Last 30 minutes	Last call for the buffet. Leftovers are packed on request (see the leftovers page), and the line is cleared.
End of slot	Egress. Thank you for leaving on time: the next group's ingress follows.

Before the event

- Advance order: 7 days before the event, or 10 days if your menu includes seafood trays. One swap per course on packages.
- Final guest count: locked with your advance order. We cook for that count. Extra guests on the day are charged the same rate per guest and are served from the trays prepared; tell us early if your group grows so we can cook more.
- Allergies and diets: tell us with your advance order. The allergen page in this guide helps your guests spot what to avoid.
- Outside food: only a lechon or a celebration cake, with corkage. Everything else is from our kitchen so we can stand behind its freshness.

Your trays, by package

Find your package and your guest range. The column shows the trays cooked for your group, and each dish lists how many guests a tray serves. Drinks are listed underneath, in units.

Leftovers and food safety

Buffet food is kept hot in chafing dishes for the length of your event. Here is what happens to what's left, and how to keep it safe if you take it home.

Your options for leftovers

- Take-home boxes at ₱50 per box. Ask our staff during the last 30 minutes and we pack what's left from your trays.
- Leave it with us. Anything not packed is disposed of at the end of your slot. For food safety, we do not keep buffet food for the next day or for later collection.
- Unopened drinks from your package (sealed bottles and cans) can be taken home. Opened towers and pitchers cannot.

Keeping take-home food safe

- Cooked food that has been out for the event should be eaten within 2 hours of packing, or refrigerated as soon as you get home.
- Reheat until steaming hot all the way through, once only. Do not reheat twice.
- Rice, pasta, seafood, egg and cream-based dishes spoil fastest. In Manila heat, treat these as same-night food.
- When in doubt, throw it out. Once food leaves the venue we can no longer vouch for how it has been stored.

How we handle your food

Cooked fresh

Trays are cooked on the day of your event, not in advance. Seafood is ordered against your booking, which is why it needs 10 days' notice.

Kept at temperature

Hot dishes are held in chafing dishes with fresh fuel through the event. Cold items are brought out in batches rather than left standing.

Served within 4 hours

Your slot is 4 hours and the buffet is cleared at the end of it. Food is never carried over to another event.

Lechon and cake brought in

Lechon is accepted with corkage (₱300 per kg, weighed on arrival) and should arrive no more than 2 hours before your event start. It is your supplier's food, so it is served as delivered and packed back into its own container if there are leftovers. Cakes are kept chilled until you ask for them.

Allergens and dietary needs

Our kitchen uses peanuts, shellfish, fish, dairy, egg, gluten, soy and pork daily, so trace contact is always possible. The list below shows the main ingredients in each dish to help guests choose. For a serious allergy, tell us with your advance order and we will brief the kitchen and your server.
